In fashion design, "boyfriend" is a style of women's clothing that draws heavily from the clothing of the 1950s. It is characterized by oversized, relaxed silhouettes that give the appearance of being worn by a man. This style is often associated with a "brotherly" or "girlfriend" aesthetic. The design is intended to be comfortable and casual, often featuring elements like button-down shirts, blouses, and jackets that are slightly larger than the wearer's actual size. This style has become popular in recent years, particularly among younger women who appreciate a more relaxed and comfortable fit.
