Haaland was named along with Mbappé in the 30-strong shortlist of nominees for the 2024 Ballon d'Or earlier this week. Aged 23 and 24 respectively, the pair's incredible goalscoring feats are often compared by the world's media, rehashing the head-to-head narrative ex-PSG man Messi and former Manchester United and Real Madrid superstar Ronaldo have found themselves in for much of the last 15 years.

Haaland pipped Mbappé to the honorific title of the world's leading goalscorer in 2024/23 with 56 competitive goals compared to the PSG man's 54 for club and country.

But the Norway international told France Football he does not see the duo duelling at distance.

"That's what everyone thinks, but you have to emphasise just how crazy the things Messi and Cristiano have done," said Haaland. "You also have to remember that they're still doing it, even if they're getting older. They're still fantastic players."

"But I never talk about myself being against other players, it's not my way of seeing things. I focus on myself, I only try to be better every day, to continue enjoying what I do and being the best version of myself."

Though he may not compare himself to his global rivals in public, Haaland does admit to watching them play.

"Yes, of course, I watch a lot of football on TV," he said. "I love football, I've always loved it, and you could say it takes up all of my time, whether professionally or in my life. But there are so many games and training sessions that I have to think about recovery too."
